Hi Odee

If you want we can meet at my office, or somewhere out in town, whatever you feel is best?

We have to have a quite decisive discussion about your project. Tuesday I had another meeting with Chloe and Katrine about the Master-exhibition. They are now at a point where they really need to know the content of your work for the exhibition, in order to plan and in order to make the necessary 'risk-analysis'. It is now quite clear that, if you cannot provide a kind of description of the content, it might be necessary to cancel your participation in the exhibition. This is a common understanding between the KMD-organisers of the exhibition (Ruby and Chloe), Katrine as head of department and the leadership of Bergen Kunsthall (they all met on Monday to discuss the process of the exhibition). Where I stand as your supervisor, is a bit more unclear – I feel quite squeezed between my various roles here - but that doesn't really matter now, since I am not the one that takes this decision.

What we need to do on Monday is to discuss this situation carefully and negotiate how and under what conditions and when you might be able to reveal the content, to me and/or to the organisers of the exhibition. Please, take some time to think about this. As a tool, I think we have to discuss various scenarios; what would it mean to reject this? What would it mean to reveal the content? How and when and to whom? As I see it, there are different options- but the crucial thing to understand/reflect upon is that these various options/acts will determine how and in what context your artwork will be discussed. The content and the context of the artwork will shift according to what options you choose as the artist.

I am sorry to say, that is now where we are in the process. How and why it came to this is of course also something to discuss/think about. But this is where we are anyways....and this is what you need to relate to. As your supervisor, I can try to help you untangle the situation - and I hope, support you in reaching a good decision.

All the best from Lisbon!

Frans

Dear Odee

I have some issues around the MA-exhibition we need to discuss, best sometime this week.

I am right now in Lisboa, as part of a conference.

If we could meet on zoom in the morning, like 11h either Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, it would be perfect.?

How are your days?

Frans
